Grieving begins for Air France families

CRASH A man celebrating his birthday; a group of workers returning from a vacation award; a woman who had just recovered from a brain injury.

As with any airline disaster, there were stories of cruel coincidences and bright young lives cut short by the crash of Air France Flight 447, which was confirmed yesterday by Brazil's military.

"My son died on his birthday," said a tearful Diana Raquel, mother of British-based Brazilian dentist Jose Rommel Amorim.

Among the 216 passengers and 12 crew was Brad Clemons, 49, a Coca-Cola executive who was born and raised in Guelph, Ont., and lived in Belgium. REUTERS

A veteran Halifax Regional Police officer claims he has been passed over for promotions because of his skin colour despite having the skills necessary for the positions he pursued.

Const. Charles Bruce, an African Nova Scotian who has spent 16 years protecting citizens, announced yesterday he has filed a human rights complaint against both the local police force and the municipality.

He joins Sgt. Robyn Atwell and former police officer Lewis Cain in filing complaints with the Nova Scotia Human Rights Commission based on race.

All three allege that systemic racism continues to poison Halifax Regional Police.

"It's not all great within the police department," Bruce, who received HRP's investigator of the year award in 2001, told a room full of reporters at the Halifax North Memorial Public Library on Gottingen Street.

Bruce said he felt "singled out" when he was forced to move from the force's drug unit, a job he enjoyed, to the major crime division, while white officers with less experience were allowed to stay behind.

He said he later applied to both the K9 division and the SWAT team, but was again turned down in favour of junior officers.

"What we're asking for folks, is a level playing field," he said, explaining the most qualified person should get the position regardless of race, gender or age.

Bruce said he feels violence is happening within the police department, pointing to an instance when a supervisor kicked out his chair, propelling him forward into the table. "It was a sheer humiliation."

Halifax lawyer Rocky Jones said yesterday it has taken incredible courage for Bruce, Atwell and Cain to come forward with their stories of discrimination.

"There is something extremely wrong in the Halifax police department, and in Halifax in general," Jones said. "We, of course, need a safer city and it's not going to be safe if our police officers, who are protecting us, are themselves saying 'we're the victims of racism.'"

HRP keep quiet on racism claims

CITY Halifax Regional Police aren't commenting on yesterday's allegations of racism.

Police spokesman Const. Brian Palmer said the force's policy is to work solely through the Human Rights Commission's process.

"We aren't prepared to play this out in the media," he said. "We're going to work (through) the process in place that is designed to deal with such complaints."

Palmer said the police force has filed an official response to the human rights complaints and is waiting to see what happens next.

The HRP had to change their policies on race relations training after North Preston heavyweight boxer Kirk Johnson won a human rights complaint against the force in 2003. The force had to pay Johnson, who is black, $10,000 in damages after he alleged he was pulled over 29 times in 11 months and had his car improperly impounded.

The force was ordered to review its anti-racism policies. Halifax Regional Municipality Mayor Peter Kelly said yesterday at city hall "there's always concern" when allegations are raised, but said the Human Rights Commission has to deal with the complaints before the municipality can respond.

Leaders' debate deflated

Restriction on interaction created basic question-and-answer

PAUL MCLEOD
paul.mcleod@metronews.ca

It was a debate without much debate.

The second and final election leaders' debate took place yesterday in Baddeck. The three main party leaders took a wide range of questions from Nova Scotians, but because of the restrictive format, couldn't really interact with each other.

Instead they each had one chance to speak per question, and then moved on. The candidates were clearly all trying for the same demeanour — calm, cool and collected.

Premier Rodney MacDonald stood from his chair and walked a couple steps forward each time he spoke, while NDP Leader Darrell Dexter and Liberal Leader Stephen McNeil remained seated when talking.

The leaders spent most of the debate outlining different parts of their platforms, while fitting in some mild swipes at each other.

There was one breach of rules when Dexter made a comment about how all three parties initially voted for gas regulation. McNeil, who wants to repeal legislation, tried to interject that the statement was misleading.

CBC debate host Norma Lee MacLeod shut him down.

"There was an amendment to that legislation," McNeil said to Dexter.

"On a point of order, I'm sorry, the rules do not allow this," MacLeod interrupted. "When it's inaccurate..." McNeil began.

"In your closing statement you can have time to correct," she said.

CBC flexed its technological might by allowing questions via Twitter, Facebook, email and video uplink.

One Twitter question turned the tables on the leaders by asking them to say something nice about their opponents. After some laughter about filibustering, they praised each other's commitments to public service, but the premier got a light-hearted swipe in.

"One of the things I think they do a tremendous job at is being critics," MacDonald said. "And I'd like to make sure they have that opportunity for a very long time."

Chamber questions parties on economic issues

Tax credits and spending cuts are some of the major political parties' top priorities for dealing with the economy, according to a release yesterday from the Halifax Chamber of Commerce.

The Liberals, NDP and Progressive Conservatives each responded to a questionnaire sent out to them by the chamber, explaining their stance on six local economic issues.

When asked to rank four policy options for dealing with falling provincial revenues, both the Tories and NDP chose cuts to "departmental spending" as their primary strategy. The NDP said these cuts would include shrinking the provincial cabinet from 18 ministers to 12.

The Liberals opted for a fifth option, saying they would "create economic growth and grow the tax base."

On the topic of economic stimulus, both the Liberals and NDP promised major tax cuts aimed at small business and the home construction industry, respectively. The Liberals also said they would introduce micro-credit loans for small businesses looking to grow.

The Tories pledged to put $1.9 billion into infrastructure and "green energy projects" across the province.

The other issues in the questionnaire were each party's stance on provincial debt levels, their strategies for controlling health care costs, their proposed changes to the tax system, and whether each party would support an "amalgamated transportation authority" for Halifax.

Union donations to NDP being examined

paul.mcleod@metronews.ca

Nova Scotia's chief electoral officer will look into union donations made to the NDP to examine whether they violated election finance laws.

During a day in the first week of the campaign the NDP said it was couriered nine separate cheques of $5,000 — the maximum allowed donation — from nine different unions, all members of the Mainland Nova Scotia Building Trades Council.

"At the time it seemed like a very good thing," NDP provincial secretary Ed Wark said.

"The contributions came in on nine separate cheques made out for $5,000 each. They were signed by the signatories for those unions, so there were no questions raised at that point."

But the NDP later learned the council had offered to reimburse the unions for the donations. The NDP voluntarily returned the money Monday after a freelance journalist told them of the conflict over the weekend.

With the NDP ahead in

Possible fines

Elections Nova Scotia spokesman Dana Doiron said the NDP did the right thing in returning the money. But he said the trades council could potentially face fines of up to $140,000. Elections Nova Scotia can level fines of up to $50,000 plus twice the money improperly donated.

the polls and a week until the election, both the Liberals and Progressive Conservative campaigns spent much of yesterday questioning union ties to the NDP.

The Tories filed a letter with Elections Nova Scotia requesting chief electoral officer Christine McCulloch contact the RCMP to investigate this case. They said the NDP did not have proper safeguards in place and speculated there may be other illegitimate donations.

"It stretches credulity to think that an official agent getting cheques from an umbrella group like this all in the same day is simply coincidence," said Tory spokesman Jordi Morgan.

ESKASONI An man was taken to hospital to be treated for smoke inhalation following an incident in Eskasoni early yesterday morning.

Eskasoni RCMP were called to a residence on Cremo's Lane after a woman advised police that it was on fire and its occupant was inside and refusing to leave.

When officers arrived, police say the home was engulfed in flames, with thick smoke coming out of the windows. Two attending RCMP officers along with a relative of the occupant could hear and see the man inside. On their second attempt they were able to reach through the window and pull the man to safety.

City to analyze plant

Forensics team to investigate sewage facility's failure: Mayor

kristen.lipscombe@metronews.ca

Halifax Regional Water Commission has hired a forensics team to find out where the city's new sewage treatment system went wrong, an analysis that could cost more than $400,000, Mayor Peter Kelly said yesterday.

But he said HRM hopes taxpayers won't be doling out any dough, as the city is claiming the costs under its insurance plan for the $54-million wastewater facility, which opened in February 2008 and shut down last January because of a flood.

The plant suffered another recent setback, as it was discovered last week the water commission has started to remove screens from sewage outfalls. And that means condoms, tampons and other untreated "floatables" are flowing back into Halifax Harbour.

"We are going to claim for any element that we can," the mayor said at city hall, following a closed door meeting about the sewage situation.

But Kelly couldn't tell reporters what was discussed during the in-camera council session, which ate up a large chunk of the afternoon. "The reason why it was (in-camera) was because of legal elements of discussion."

He said the forensics company should determine what caused the breakdown within two weeks. Not even city officials know how the harbour mishap happened, he said.

In the meantime, he said the municipality is doing its "due diligence" by looking at any alternative ways to stop solid waste from entering Halifax waters, and plans to meet with its insurance company within a week.

Also yesterday, city councillors voted to defer debate over HRMByDesign for two weeks. Coun. Jerry Blumenthal, who represents Halifax North End, made the motion but not every councillor was in favour of rescheduling discussion about the proposed urban blueprint.

"I opposed that," Coun. Debbie Hum of Rockingham-Wentworth told reporters outside council chambers. "There have been members of public here all afternoon, waiting, and I thought it was very unfair."

Bracing for Bill 44

Alberta school boards 'on edge' over law: Group

The passage of a heavily debated human rights law meant to allow Alberta parents to limit what their children are taught about sex, religion and sexual orientation has left teachers with more questions than answers, says the head of a group representing the province's school boards.

Alberta School Boards Association president Heather Welwood said teachers across the province are bracing for the backlash over Bill 44, which was passed yesterday.

"It's going to take awhile before we understand the implications and what's required," she said. "It won't be business as usual. It's going to take dollars to put those things in place."

Culture Minister Lindsay Blackett said he will be in close contact with teachers' school boards to "quell any misconceptions that may have been created" during the debates. Amendments to the bill exempt off-the-cuff controversial conversations between students and teachers, though Welwood predicts impromptu chats could become subject for human rights complaints.

Teachers won't stray from status quo with lessons until details about Bill 44 are drafted, she said, which could take up to three years.

"It has the school board on edge until we know what we're dealing with," Welwood said.

Though in-class discussions of same-sex relationships and religion are now optional by law, Welwood wants parents to work with their child's school before filing a human rights complaint if they feel ill-informed.

"We want parents to know their first stop is still the school," she said.

Blackett suggested the Alberta Human Rights Commission may work with the school boards to implement a plan they "will feel comfortable with to ensure there will be no cases brought up" to the commission.

"We in Alberta believe in family values, and the family is at the core of what makes a great community," said Blackett, who added he expects to see no complaints about teachers filed to the commission.

Plane debris found

All 228 passengers aboard thought to be dead

Brazilian military planes have found the wreckage of an Air France jet that crashed in the Atlantic Ocean with 228 people on board earlier this week, the defence minister said yesterday.

Nelson Jobim said there was "no doubt" that the five-kilometre strip of wreckage was from the Airbus A330 that went missing early on Monday after flying into stormy weather.

"It confirms that the plane fell in this area," Jobim said in Rio de Janeiro, from where the plane took off on Sunday night for its planned route to Paris.

The debris spotted by

Passengers lost

- Among the 216 passengers were executives from major companies that have ramped up investments in Brazil in recent years and European tourists as well as seven children and one baby.

Brazilian air force pilots earlier yesterday included plane seats, an orange buoy, metallic objects and fuel stains in the water about 1,200 kilometres northeast of the Brazilian coastal city of Recife.

Jobim said no bodies had yet been sighted by military pilots who scoured the area and that finding the "black box" flight data and voice recorders that hold clues to why the plane crashed would be a "extremely difficult."

The chances of finding survivors among the 12 crew and 216 passengers of 32 different nationalities appeared close to zero, meaning it would be the worst disaster in Air France's 75-year history.

The recorders could be on the ocean floor at a depth of 2,000 to 3,000 metres. Senior French minister Jean-Louis Borloo said it was "a race against the clock" to find them, as they only emit signals for up to 30 days. REUTERS

As I'm about to launch into the abortion "debate" ("meele" is more like it) at this late date in my life and career, I can only conclude I've learned nothing about keeping my mouth shut when it's prudent to do so.

Still, I'm inspired by Barack Obama ... once again. The U.S. president, who has become something of a poster boy for common sense, showed his chops again recently, accepting an invitation to address the graduating class at Notre Dame — a Catholic university and a hotbed of anti-abortion sentiment.

What he said made a lot of sense, whatever side you're on. "Maybe we won't agree on abortion," he said. "But we can still agree that this heart-wrenching decision for any woman is not made casually. It has both a moral and a spiritual dimension."

He went on: "When we open our hearts and our minds to those who may not think or believe what we do — that's when we discover at least the possibility of common ground."

Wise words. Compassionate words. Civilized words. But many of his audience had crosses or little infants' feet painted on their mortarboards. Three dozen protesters were carted away for trying to disrupt the U.S. president's speech. They weren't interested in common ground.

And then, this past Sunday, two weeks after Obama's address, some guy in Kansas shot and killed a doctor who performed abortions while he was serving as an usher at his church.

Meanwhile, up here, the archbishop of Montreal, Cardinal Jean-Claude Turcotte, resigned from the Order of Canada because Henry Morgentaler, our most famous/notorious doctor who performed abortions, was also honoured. Clearly, resigning in a huff is not as extreme as murder, but neither is an invitation to seek common ground.

What's interesting about so many of these guys is that they are guys. Perhaps feeling left out because they can't get pregnant, they indulge in righteous rage. Convinced that every sperm is sacred, that even the most rudimentary stages in the development of the human fetus must be protected, they're not about to pause and allow reason to inform the discussion even if it leads to the final absurdity: Take life to save life.

Frankly, I don't like abortion. But I don't like the alternative, which is unwanted pregnancy, or backstreet butchery. And it seems obvious: Stem cell research is moral light years away from late-term abortion. The issue is complex and vexing, and I applaud Obama's attempt to find common ground. But in abortion, we have an issue that exposes civilization as a thin crust spread lightly over a seething mass of molten mayhem.

Wise words, I fear, are not enough.

A: Yes ... Holidays are great because if you end up working you make more money, and if you don't then you can enjoy the day.

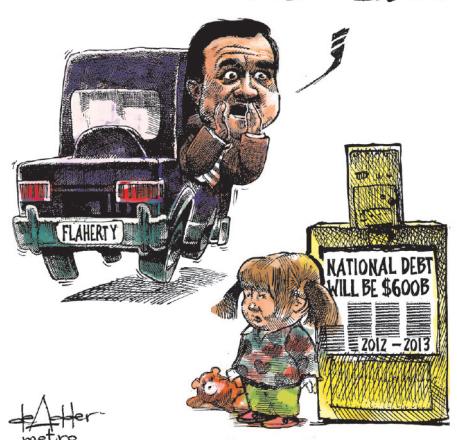

Richard Kevis

age 19, Calgary

A: Probably not. Days off aren't really practical. They're not really used for anything. They're not really necessary to the system.

Chrysler sales crash by half

Overall Canadian vehicle purchases down by 16.5% in May

The taint of bankruptcy court protection and idle plants slashed Chrysler Canada's business by half last month.

Sales for the reeling auto giant, which is offering huge incentives under a "Buy With Confidence" program, crashed by more than 13,600 to 13,657 vehicles in May from the same month last year.

Meanwhile, the sputtering industry limited its losses to 16 per cent after monthly declines of more than 25 per cent earlier in the year.

Chrysler, whose volumes also plunged a stunning 47 per cent in the U.S. last month, said its retail sales actually improved here despite the move to court protection south of the border.

Chrysler topped the market only a few months ago but slid to fifth place in May.

Tories reviewing sale of some assets: Flaherty

OTTAWA The federal government is reviewing only some of its holdings this year for possible inclusion in an asset sale as it grapples with a record budget deficit, Finance Minister Jim Flaherty said yesterday.

Flaherty was reacting to a report in the Globe and Mail newspaper yesterday that said all of the federal government's assets were being considered in the review.

The government is depending on billions of dollars from asset sales as part of its plan to re-balance the books by Jim Flaherty 2013-2014.

The Globe said that the CBC, Via Rail and the Royal Canadian Mint were among the assets to be reviewed, but Flaherty said the review this year does not cover the CBC.

The Conservative government first announced

GM to sell Hummer

• GM said yesterday it reached a tentative deal to sell its Hummer brand to Sichuan

Tengzhong Heavy Industrial, a privately held Chinese company.

Overall sales of new cars and trucks in Canada fell 16.5 per cent, or almost 30,500, to 154,018 vehicles during May. It was the seventh consecutive month that auto sales have declined here.

Sales in the first five months of the year have also dropped 19.5 per cent, or 140,960, to 582,518 vehicles.

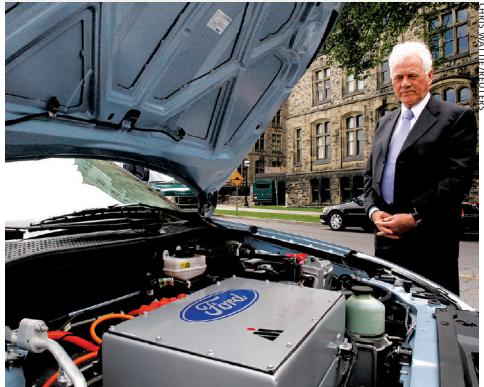

Teetering GM said its sales in Canada fell 12.4 per cent to 31,784 vehicles in May.

Ford Motor Co. of Canada reported that sales dropped 7.3 per cent to 21,900 in May, but the automaker increased its market share for the seventh consecutive month.

Most other major automakers posted negative results, including Toyota and Honda.

Banks raise rates on mortgages by 0.2%

FINANCE Canada's biggest banks are hiking key mortgage rates at a time when the bond market is worried about risk and inflation.

Royal Bank of Canada, Bank of Montreal, Toronto-Dominion Bank, Bank of Nova Scotia and Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce increased posted rates on five-year, fixed-rate mortgages by 0.2 per cent to 5.45 per cent. The changes at RBC and BMO took effect yesterday, while new rates at TD, Scotiabank and CIBC are available today. RBC, BMO and Scotiabank, however, also have "special offers" on five-year closed mortgages at 4.15 per cent. Those rates, subject to change without notice, also reflect a 0.2 per cent increase.

Borrowing costs on the bond market largely influence consumer rates. Yields on longer-term bonds have soared in recent weeks, driving up the cost of borrowing for lenders. Experts say yields are rising because the bond market is focusing on risk and the future prospects for inflation.

Central banks usually try to control inflation by raising interest rates. The Bank of Canada's overnight rate is sitting at 0.25 per cent, and it has signalled plans to hold it there well into 2010, depending on inflation.

The bond market, though, sees a risk that interest rates may change down the road, said TD economist Grant Bishop.

New Xbox technology unveiled

GAMING Microsoft Corp. offered a glimpse into a future where the Xbox 360 console is the centrepiece of any living room, and games, social interaction and communications are controlled with the wave of a hand.

At a star-studded event at the annual E3 video game conference that drew appearances by Paul McCartney and Steven Spielberg, the company unveiled Project Natal, which uses a camera to track a user's movements via full skeletal mapping. It also recognizes voices and vocal commands.

The technology obviates the need for a controller or remote device to enable a player, for instance, to drive a car in a game, interact with a character on screen or show pictures and information to other Xbox users over the Internet.

Balsillie clears another hurdle

COYOTES The co-chief executive officer of BlackBerry maker Research in Motion Ltd. received U.S. antitrust approval to buy the National Hockey League's Phoenix Coyotes, U.S. officials said yesterday.

Antitrust authorities completed their review of James Balsillie's deal for the Coyotes without taking any action to block it, the U.S. Federal Trade Commission said in a notice.

Balsillie offered to buy the money-losing hockey team in May when it filed for bankruptcy protection, but his offer is contingent on relocating the Coyotes to Ontario. NHL officials have said the league is committed to keeping the team in Phoenix and have fought with Coyotes' owner Jerry Moyes over who controls the hockey team.

Balsillie has threatened to drop his offer if the team's sale and relocation cannot be agreed upon by June 29.

Herd seeking eager prospects

'It's ridiculous when you've got to beg a 16-year-old kid to come here,' says GM

MATTHEW WUEST
matthew.wuest@metronews.ca

The QMJHL draft can be a game, but Halifax Mooseheads general manager Cam Russell doesn't intend to play.

Russell enters his first draft as GM at Moncton Coliseum on Saturday seeking players who are eager to come to Halifax to further their hockey careers. He talks as though he will ignore any prospect playing the NCAA card, looking for exorbitant education packages and special side deals.

"I'm not going to beg anybody to come and play for one of the best franchises in North America," Russell said. "It's ridiculous when you've got to beg a 16-year-old kid to come here. They shouldn't be the ones holding all the cards."

Every year, the draft is littered with blue-chip prospects who say they're headed the NCAA route, only to have last-minute changes of heart after failing to a team they "just couldn't say no to." But there are no guarantees. Halifax got burned when they picked U.S. prospect Mike Cichy 44th overall in 2006 and have taken numerous late-round U.S. no-shows.

Russell doesn't see a downside to red-flagging prospects.

"There are lots of players out there," said Russell, head coach since 2006 and GM since January. "You can't get caught up with one guy who is asking for ridiculous things."

He hopes his approach will play a big role in helping him put his own unique stamp on the hockey club.

"We want to have players who want to be here, who are proud to wear the Mooseheads jersey, who are excited to come play at the rink every night," said Russell.

Follow Matthew Wuest's Mooseheads coverage all week and at the draft at: metronews.ca/mooseheads

"Hard work, character and honesty are the three things we're looking for."

Russell said that current Mooseheads Travis Randell, Gabriel Desjardins and Gabriel O'Connor, among others, are examples of the type of player he wants to acquire.

"You love (those types of guys)," he said. "Kids who are happy to be here and very respectful young men."

He added he has been careful to ensure that everybody on his scouting staff is on the same page.

"We're going to work as a team," he said.

"We're all after the same goal, and that's to be known as a hard-working, exciting, honest hockey team to watch."

Moosehead general manager Cam Russell cites Gabriel O'Connor as the type of player he wants to acquire.

Axemen land ex-Herd captain

HOCKEY Another former Halifax Mooseheads captain has chosen the Acadia Axemen for university hockey.

Graham Bona told Metro Halifax yesterday he is headed to Acadia, following in the footsteps of former Mooseheads greats Brandon Benedict and Robbie Sutherland.

The six-foot-three, 217-pound defenceman likes the Wolfville school's kinesiology program and is excited to join an Axemen team that is hoping to contend for the next few seasons.

"It's not going to be an easy step," said Bona, who had six goals and 16 assists in 68 games last season for Halifax.

"They have a good team and they're really building for the next couple of years. It's definitely going to be tough to crack the lineup to start but I'm up for the challenge."

The Spryfield native spent two and a half seasons with the Mooseheads and won a President Cup as a teammate of Sidney Crosby with Rimouski in 2005.

IKON nominee Saulnier sets high goals for herself

MATTHEW WUEST

The Canada-U.S. women's hockey rivalry is one of the greatest in all of sport. Jillian Saulnier knows firsthand.

The Halifax native, unveiled yesterday as a nominee for an IKON Sport Award as Nova Scotia's female team athlete of the year, was in the heat of the battle in January at the world under-18 hockey championship in Fussen, Germany.

Saulnier, one of the province's top female hockey players, came away with silver in an overtime heartbreaker.

"I've never felt so exhilarated in my whole life," said Saulnier, who had a breakaway chance near the end of regulation.

"There's nothing less than No. 1 that you want to be. The rivalry is there, for sure. I think it will always be there."

The 17-year-old forward is eligible to return to the Canadian under-18 team for the 2010 worlds, meaning she has a realistic shot at redemption against the U.S.

"It was a great experience and we had a blast," she said of the tournament. "The process starts over now and hopefully I get selected again and we can (go for gold)."

Nissan, Ford turn to social media to get their message across

MICHAEL GOETZ
for Metro Canada

Automakers have been using traditional marketing media — like print, billboards, and television — for decades. But there's a new automotive marketing force in town — social media.

Of course "social media" is the more scholarly term for networking sites like Facebook, Twitter, MySpace, YouTube, Flickr, etc.

And, two major auto-related "social media" initiatives of late have been widely successful, and news travels at warp speed in these social media circles.

One of those initiatives is the Fiesta Movement. As part of Ford's social media blitz, 100 young, American trendsetters will drive and live with a European-spec Fiesta for six months, travelling as agents on special missions, who then relate their experiences through various sites.

"We were already using social media as part of our regular communication channels, and that made it all the easier for us to try something as bold as the Fiesta Movement," notes Scott Monty, who heads up

The first major auto-related social media attraction for Canadians is hypercube.ca — essentially an online stage for 500 creative thinkers to demonstrate their social creativity in "Cube worthiness." The best 50 will win a new Nissan Cube (winners will be announced on June 23). Winners will then blog regularly for a year, on how their Cubes "interact with their creative lives."

"The uniqueness of the Cube gave us an opportunity to do something different, to veer off from our traditional launch formula," said Catherine Green, the advertising manager at Nissan Canada. "Our ultimate goal is to create a community of Cube advocates, to provide the content for the Cube community and ultimately become our advertising."

It seems to be working. When the monthlong audition period ended on May 16, the hypercube.ca pages had garnered over 1.4 million hits, surprising Nissan with not only the high level of engagement and creativity, but also the "tweet ups" and other "community" activities that sprung up, without any prodding or assistance from the automaker.

Edgier Murano

MARK ATKINSON
for Metro Canada

The redesigned Nissan Murano

$2,950.

All that is thrown into one of Nissan's better cabin designs. The gauges are bright and legible, major controls easy to find, and better-than-average materials, with roomy second row and cargo space.

On the road, the Murano's habits are merely OK. It's not sporty, with too much lean and vague steering, but the suspension thumps over the smallest imperfections. There's a lot Nissan could do to improve this for future releases. Performance-wise, acceleration is strong and the CVT works well enough that you never notice it.

Despite the Murano's many features and styling, the problem is its pricing. My LE tester's sticker totalled $50,583 before freight, PDI and taxes.

A similar Ford Edge Limited AWD runs a touch over $46,000. Infiniti's EX35 totals about $48,600 with all the bells and whistles.

That means, other than styling and brand loyalty, there isn't anything the Murano does outstanding enough to make it worthy of recommendation.

When the Nissan Murano first appeared, it was the most futuristic design available, especially compared to its competitors' boxy SUVs. The Murano offered decent levels of equipment, a healthy V6, optional all-wheel drive and a reasonable ride.

Fast forward to 2009, and the Murano's up for its first makeover. Not much has changed in its brief — meaning a car-based, five-seat crossover — but the competition is much fiercer than in '03. Nearly every major manufacturer has at least one such vehicle in its lineup — and sometimes more. The question is whether Nissan's evolution is enough to keep it relevant.

Size-wise, the new Murano is within a hair of its predecessor, although the new design is edgier. Its snout is pointier, and the sculptured front fenders mean it's difficult to know where its corners are. The rear follows the general themes from the Nissan Rogue, and doesn't match the front's drama.

The rising beltline, thick A-pillars and small rear window mean big blind spots, although the large side mirrors help.

All Muranos feature Nissan's 3.5-litre V6 with 265 hp and 248 lb-ft of torque, matched with a continuously

Solar car kings

Canadian teams shining on world stage

MARK ATKINSON
for Metro Canada

When it comes to alternative fuel technologies, solar power usually comes up short of hydrogen fuel cells or battery-powered exotics. Despite our unpredictable weather, Canada's place in the solar-car kingdom is excellent, with a couple of universities putting in outstanding performances not only in North America, but against the world's best.

The University of Waterloo, located in Canada's technology capital in Waterloo, Ont., has over 20 years of experience in designing, building and competing with solar-powered racecars. Starting with the inaugural General Motors Sunrayce Challenge in 1990, the Midnight Sun team is the only Canadian solar-car team to consistently have qualified and raced in every North American event. And, the team set a Guinness World Record in 2004 by travelling 15,070 km back and forth across the United States for 41 straight days, the longest single journey made by a solar-powered vehicle, and more than double the previous record.

Midnight Sun's co-business manager Cody Bryant said he was quickly attracted to the program.

"I had always had a keen interest in cars and the opportunity to work with such a unique project appealed greatly to me," he said.

The team consists of 30 core members, with more than 200 student volunteers participating in the program's two-year cycle. Waterloo is usually the top Canadian team during the North American Solar Challenge (NASC) and the World Solar Challenge (WSC), held every other year in Australia.

If Waterloo represents the Yankees of the Canadian solar-car competitions, the University of Calgary must be like the Florida Marlins: relatively new on the scene, but already fighting with and beating the heavyweights.

While only having built two cars to Waterloo's nine, Calgary's team has made their efforts count, being the first rookies to complete an NASC in 2005, and finishing the 2005 WSC first in class with their Soleon racecar. After building Schulich 1 in 2007, U of C was the top-ranking Canadian team in the '07 WSC, upsetting Waterloo in the process.

"We currently have approximately 35 students working on the engineering team, and about 10 students working on the business team, all from a variety of faculties," says Jeff Wickenheiser, project co-chair and engineering manager for the University of Calgary team.

GT3 ready for racetrack

PETER BLEAKNEY
for Metro Canada

From day one, Porsche's philosophy has been to build sports cars that are as equally happy on the road as on the racetrack. Drive your Porsche to the local circuit, thrash it like a rented mule and Dr. Ferdinand Porsche smiles at you from the beyond.

Then there are some that are more track ready than others.

The $138,100 2010 Porsche 911 GT3, which tilts heavily toward the racing side of the equation, will be arriving in Canada sometime in July. It is a significantly upgraded version of the 2008 997-based GT3.

The GT3's dry-sump naturally aspirated 3.8L flat-six, (which is not related to the direct-injection 3.8L in the "regular" Carrera S), traces its lineage back to the 1996

DreamCar

Porsche 911 GT1 racer.

It makes 435 hp at 7600 rpm and 317 lb-ft at 6250 rpm. This is up 20 horses and 17 lb-ft over last year's 3.6L version of the same powerplant. It rips to a 8500 rpm redline and powers the rear wheels via a six-speed manual transmission with interchangeable gear ratios.

The 2010 GT3 acceler-

ates to 100 km/h in 4.1 seconds, 200 km/h in 12.3 seconds and tops out at 312 km/h (193 mph).

But numbers don't tell the full story. Twist the key and the 3.8L race engine barks to life and settles into a busy, guttural idle. Grab the Alcantara wheel, depress the firm clutch, slot the short shifter into first and within the first few hundred metres this car telegraphs exactly what it's all about.

The 2010 GT3 accelerates to 100 km/h in 4.1 seconds, 200 km/h in 12.3 seconds and tops out at 312 km/h (193 mph).

I have never driven a 911 that bites and digs in like this one — and instills such confidence. In the post-card perfect part of Germany where I tested the GTS, it proved to be a devastatingly fast and precise tool. Steering and chassis feedback come at you in beautiful hi-definition.

Shapes of cars to come

Despite Obama's pledge, going green will be tough

By 2016, electric vehicles might be as affordable as petrol cars.

U.S. President Barack Obama has declared that cars made in the United States would have to meet a target of an average 35.5 mpg by 2016, with reductions starting in 2012. The move will reduce America's carbon dioxide emissions by 30 per cent as well as reduce dependence on foreign oil.

It's a radical proposition — especially given that no car manufacturer's fleet comes anywhere near that average. Carmakers will have to work hard and spend money they don't have, to phase out the gas-guzzlers in their portfolios and introduce energy-sippers.

No wonder American automakers and Bush's oilbarons had been resisting cuts for years. It's going to be especially hard for those whose most successful cars are SUV and high-performance models.

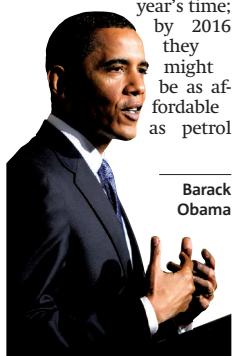

The other issue is that it takes time for the technology to get on the road. It takes the average car produced by a major carmaker at least four years to go from initial design to dealership, forecast, via marketing, engineering, safety testing, and factory safety testing, and factory floor. Developing new technology is phenomenally expensive, then creating the plants that can produce cars with the new technology is more expense still. This is why manufacturers often share platforms like the Ford Ka and the Fiat 500, for example.

Most carmakers have been going eco for the last few years, but progress is slow. So what's in the pipeline? The current economic climate as well as our eco expectations will shape the next few years — most people will be looking to buy smaller, cheaper-to-fuel cars. Expect more electric cars in three cars in three year's time; by 2016 they might be as affordable as petrol

Croatia's warm-weather charms

Sunny coastlines, serene islands are among draws

TOM MARCHANT
for Metro World News

At this time of year I frequently get asked where I'm going to spend my summer holidays. Not an easy answer, as every day, word of new destinations and existing gems comes across my desk.

That sees me either shifting my plans or trying to squeeze more and more places into one trip, with the result being a manic week of travelling, rather than the relaxing break I had hoped for. However, this year is different. Why? Because the place that I'm heading to is currently streets ahead of anywhere else in Europe to take a break in and nothing that I have seen or read about this year has come close to making me change my opinion. Where I am talking about? Croatia.

It's the home of sun-drenched coastlines with some of the prettiest bays and bluest waters you will ever see, serene islands, beautiful cities and a rich culture that delights you upon your arrival and stays with you for years after you have left.

Whilst many people know about the charms of Dubrovnik (and rightly so) Croatia still contains many hidden gems that the travelling world is only just waking up to. I could write an essay on the wonders of the place here, but space doesn't allow it, so I have had to filter through my long list of highlights and share with you my top three spots.

How to learn about the rest? Simple. Just go.

Hvar

Hip partying and gourmet seafood: The island of Hvar is a jewel in the Adriatic Sea, found north (a ferry ride or short helicopter hop) off Dubrovnik's coast. This unspoiled island is becoming one of Eastern Europe's hippest coastal party spots. The word now is to forget Ibiza, because it's all about Hvar. Hip bars, clubs and restaurants combine with rugged ancient landscapes filled with fragrant sage and lavender, rich aloe and pine trees.

Spend days on the water, or wine tasting in the vineyards before heading to the waterfront in the medieval heart of Hvar for sunset drinks looking over the Paklinski Islands and gearing up for a long night out.

Dubrovnik

Cobbled streets and thriving cafés: Yes, you may know it but you need to go back. Soak up the medieval mood radiating from the old squares, magnificent stone columns and wide streets of Dubrovnik.

Stroll the atmospheric pedestrianized paving slabs of this UNESCO World Heritage Site, and admire its forts, red-tile roofed-buildings, churches and monasteries. The Old Town is brimming with cafes, bars and restaurants hugging the Adriatic seafront, perfect for a morning coffee or evening sundowner.

A picture-perfect place and if you were after an alternative take on it I'd recommend taking a guided kayak tour around the grand city walls, or mountain biking in nearby Konavle valley to explore the local countryside.

Korcula

Medieval charm and one super lux retreat: People say Hvar is a secret. Well, maybe, but this one is a true secret. My insider tip: Head for the stunning island of Korcula, right now hottest thing to rise from this country. It's flung roughly equidistant between Dubrovnik and Hvar.

The beautiful stone castle welcoming you as you sail into the harbour is just a taste of the old world charm that the island oozes. Get lost in the winding alleyways, between terracotta-tiled houses and tiny churches.

It's all a short stroll from the beach of this up-and-coming island that few on the tourist trail know about.

A true escape amongst the warm waters of the Adriatic. Go now and be the envy of your friends with your tales of your time in this undiscovered spot.

Good to know

Where to stay: Riva Hotel in Hvar is Croatia's first and only member of Small Luxury Hotels of the World. Expect old world charm, state of the art luxury, exceptional designed and superb sunset views over the Islands.

No better place to lay your head after a hard day of strolling, sunbathing and partying in Dubrovnik than at the Pucic Palace. Hidden within the walls of the medieval town, there is a brand new luxury retreat opening this month: the Lesic Dimitri Palace is a restored 18th century bishop's palace with five adjoining medieval cottages.

Each room is designed with exceptional attention to detail and themed on a different region of Marco Polo's Silk Road travels.

Shopping: The main shopping area in Dubrovnik is The Stradun, but for a great local market go to Gundulic Square which has a wonderful fruit and flower market every morning, except for Sundays.

Getting

there: Croatia is accessible from most European countries by coach, and by ferry from Italy or Greece. There are major international airports in Dubrovnik, Pula, Split, Zadar and Zagreb.

Getting around: Renting a car is straightforward, and there are good and inexpensive bus and train services that links the major cities.

When to go: the best weather is between April and September, July and August are high season, with high prices and crowded beaches and towns.

Buzios beach life

How a fishing village became Brazil's answer to St. Tropez

BRUNO GHETTI
Metro World News

In the '60s, the actress Brigitte Bardot, the biggest diva of the French film at the time, came to Brazil and was taken on holiday by friends to Armação dos Búzios, a small fishing village close to Rio de Janeiro.

As soon as she set eyes on the almost untouched, extraordinarily beautiful white sand beaches, she fell in love with the place.

Today, a bronze sculpture on Armação Beach pays homage to the French starlet who first drew the world's attention to this Brazilian beach resort. Ever since, Buzios has become one of the hottest tourist destinations in Rio de Janeiro State, attracting visitors from all over the world, many of them celebrities including Mick Jagger, Cat Stevens and Seal.

Buzios has a population of less than 25,000, but that number increases by around three times during weekends and holidays. Despite being a hugely popular destination, Buzios still keeps an atmosphere that evokes its early days as a simple fishing village.

It's known throughout Brazil for the beauty of its azure sea, the cleanliness of its sand and the variety of its beaches. It's a popular destination for water sports fans, but it's also perfect for those who are just looking to relax and unwind, which is why it's such a favourite with celebrities taking a retreat.

There are plenty of top restaurants, fancy spas and boutique hotels catering to the jet set, but holidaying here is not just for the rich and famous — the city has hotels, inns and hostels for all kinds of budgets.

It also doesn't matter what kind of beach you like: You'll find one that suits you well in Buzios. The city has more than 20 of them, each one with a different profile.

Geribá is probably the most famous and busiest beach in town. Located by open sea, it has clear water and it's a good place for practising water sports. Plenty of small, very cosy inns can be found along the shoreline.

Not very far from there, Ferradurinha Beach is probably one of the most beautiful spots in the whole country. Minuscule, it is not as charming as it used to be decades ago, when it was more difficult to access than it is today. Still, its landscape alone merits a visit.

If you can't resist paradise-like beaches, then the ones on your list should include Azeda, Azedinha, João Fernandes, João Fernandinho and Das Focas. But bear in mind that some of them can't be reached by car, only on foot.

Divers must try Tartaruga Beach. And those who like a challenging, agitated sea should look for Praia Brava, which means "angry beach" in Portuguese. People with little children, on the other hand, should go to Ferradura Beach, with its very calm water. In Portuguese, Ferradura means "horseshoe,"

Rua das Pedras: Buzios' trendiest spot

The city is very busy during the day, but it also boasts a lively nightlife. The heart of Buzios' night time activities is concentrated around Rua das Pedras (Stone Street), close to Armação Beach.

As the name says, the street is completely paved with stones, giving the place a rustic charm. Along the street you can find a lot of good restaurants, bars, and souvenir stores. There are also trendy

Online agencies end airline booking fees

Fees charged by the four U.S. online travel agencies to book most flights could be a thing of the past as the companies, hungry for market share, try to make their offerings more appealing to the traveling public.

Orbitz Worldwide Monday said it has permanently removed airline ticket booking fees on domestic and international flights. Travelocity said Monday it would continue to waive flight booking fees. Expedia Inc said the same thing last week.

The fee waivers at those companies began this year as promotions. Priceline.com has not charged fees for published price airline bookings since 2007.

While the new fee waivers could stimulate travel bookings, they also threaten to erode revenue for the companies, which have been suffering as the recession takes its toll on spending for business and leisure trips.

"To be honest, when they say permanent, I don't know how truthful that really is," said Morningstar analyst Warren Miller.

"I can't see them not coming back at some point. That's how they make money," he said.

Miller noted that online travel agencies typically make about 15 per cent of their total bookings value in fees. Of the three publicly traded online travel agencies — Expedia, Priceline and Orbitz — only Priceline saw bookings growth in the first quarter.

The companies have been hit hard by economic woes and also by airline capacity cuts that reduce the number of tickets the travel agencies can sell.

Podcast tour of New York features TV, movie sites

NEW YORK Visitors to the Big Apple will be able to scope out some of the city's famous sites that have been featured in films and television shows with free podcasts unveiled by the city on Monday.

Listeners to the walking tours will be guided to the firehouse featured in the popular 1984 film Ghost Busters and the bar where the Cosmopolitan cocktail was created.

The walking tours called, Made in NY: Walking Tours of Film and TV Locations, will also feature street locations from films such as Woody Allen's 1977 hit, Annie Hall, and movies such as Kramer vs. Kramer, Sophie's Choice, and Green Card.

"It's so cool to be guided to the locations that were filmed on our city streets and in front of such iconic buildings," actor Matthew Modine said in a statement.

Modine, who starred in the film Married to the Mob and actress Julianna Margulies, of the television series ER, will narrate the podcasts that will begin with two tours in Manhattan, each one hour long.

The first tour will run from the Tribeca district to City Hall, taking in The Brooklyn Bridge and Foley Square, which is regularly seen in TV series Law & Order.

The second tour travels through the financial district, past the Statue of Liberty and shows locations from films including Wall Street, Working Girl, and Men in Black.

Other sites featured in the podcasts are from the TV series Spin City and 30 Rock.

The podcasts are available through www.nyc.gov/film. Other New York areas will be featured in future podcasts, officials said.

Oickle created Trot In Time 14 years ago following the chance purchase of an old buggy. After a few years as a lawn ornament the cart underwent an extensive restoration and his first horse, Cindy, went into service. In other words, Oickle literally put the cart before the horse.

Then he studied up on local history – historical facts as well as the ample and fascinating legends and folklore. Finding an amusing twist around every corner has become the hallmark of Oickle's operation which draws many repeat customers from both the "locals" and visitors. "When I make them laugh and they have a good time, that's what I call a pay day."

While humor definitely drives this business, hard work has paid off with a fleet that now includes seven horses, each with their own designated driver, and four wagons, as well as the farm in nearby Garden Lots that the World's greatest ceilings

Michelangelo's painted ceiling in the Sistine Chapel in Rome may be the most lauded in the ceiling world, but it's far from the only one worth straining your neck to see. The editors and members of travel website VirtualTourist.com have compiled a list of the World's Top 10 Greatest Ceilings, apart from the Sistine Chapel:

1 Bellagio Hotel; Las Vegas The coloured disks that float on the ceiling of the Bellagio may look like multi-coloured jellyfish, but they are in fact thousands of hand-blown glass flowers. Like the town itself, it has to be seen to be believed.

2 Debre Berhan Selassie Church; Gonder, Ethiopia You'd never guess by looking at the outside of this small, relatively simple church that such stunning artwork graces the inside. It's said that none of the 104 winged cherubs that dot the ceiling are alike.

3 Grand Central Station; New York City Once covered in black grime, this ceiling was restored in the 1990s as part of the station's renovation and now depicts several signs of the zodiac in beautiful sea-green and gold hues. There's even a little patch that was left dirty just to show the difference between the "before" and "after."

4 Galeries Lafayette Department Store; Paris

The glass domed ceiling at the famed department store attracts as many tourists as shoppers.

Unveiled in 1912, the dome is overshadowed only by the view from the store's terrace.

5 Khai Dinh Tomb; Hue, Vietnam It took 11 years to complete, but the results are pretty astounding with the ceiling featuring nine hand-painted dragons in fine, fleeting clouds.

6 Sant'Ignazio Church; Rome It's almost impossible to believe when looking at this multi-dimensional painting that the surface is actually flat. Perhaps one of the most incredible examples of "Trick of the Eye" paintings ever completed, it's a clear rival with its more famous nearby neighbour — the Sistine Chapel.

7 Sagrada Familia; Barcelona No one could ever say this building was constructed too hastily. Started in the 1800s and still unfinished, the imposing forest-like ceiling is as original as the rest of the Gaudi-designed church.

8 Central Rotunda, Griffith Park Observatory; Los Angeles Designed by Hollywood art director turned muralist Hugo Ballin, the subtle, circular painting depicts the signs of the zodiac and other celestial objects. An interesting side note: Ballin was a sketch artist on the film The Wizard of Oz, which might explain the ceiling's whimsical look.

This genuine Tiffany ceiling is so incredible it's enough to distract even the most ardent shopaholic. Over 100 years old, it's composed of more than 1.6 million pieces of glass and is considered by many to be one of the best examples of Tiffany craftsmanship ever constructed.

10 Opera Garnier; Paris Although the primary function of the building is to provide a stage for the city's extraordinary ballet company, Marc Chagall's ceiling mural is a show in itself.

Thought to be somewhat incongruous with the building's architecture, it was the source of much controversy when added in 1964. REUTERS

Chiropody is for doctors who love a quick hit of success. "I've seen an elderly lady walking in with two canes ending up walking without a cane. Those are the kinds of things that will stay with you forever," says Andrew Springer, a chiropodist in Oshawa, Ont.

"Career-wise, it's a wonderful opportunity for people who like immediate gratification because you get to impact on their quality of life," he explains. "I've often said to family doctors that we're luckier than they are, because so often people go in (to family doctors) when they're sick and they don't see them again until they're sick again. We get to make them feel better."

Springer started out in zoology, but both of his parents independently suggested chiropody to him. "I decided to check it out. I had to choose between bugs and people, and people it was," the past president of the Ontario Society of Chiropodists explains.

Springer has been working since 1983 in many hospitals and health-care clinics. Like most chiropodists, wound up in private practice. He says chiropodists work hand in hand — or foot in foot? — with other doctors.

"We have to understand

Chiropody, the treatment of feet and their ailments, is for doctors who love a quick hit of success.

per cent of time you see an improvement in their comfort. It really can be a quality of life issue."

Problems of the feet sometimes point to bigger issues. When Springer worked in a general hospital, he had to rush a patient to emergency. "The evidence I saw in front of me was that he'd recently had a stroke and he didn't even know."

The victim had sat down in his La-Z-Boy and couldn't get up. He had problems walking and went to Springer in the hopes a shoe insert would sort things out. "They think it's nothing related to anything bigger, 'My feet just aren't working properly.'"

To become a chiropodist, you need an undergraduate degree before studying at a health institute that teaches chiropody.

"It prepares people to deal with all the diseases, disorders and dysfunctions of the foot," says Springer.

Beyond his wildest dreams

Will Ferrell is back with Land of the Lost

NED EHRBAR
for Metro Canada

Will Ferrell just wants to be taken seriously. The comic actor, who got his start on Saturday Night Live and has gone on to become one of the biggest comedy stars in Hollywood, loves making films like this week's Land of the Lost, don't get him wrong. But what he's really looking for is another Stranger Than Fiction, his critically acclaimed 2006 foray into more dramatic work.

"They're more difficult to find for me," Ferrell says of projects like Stranger Than Fiction. "I'm still not thought of in that way. I'm still thought of more as just comedy." And with good reason. Ferrell's penchant for playing blowhards and self-important buffoons has led to some major box office successes.

And he hopes to add to that list with Land of the Lost, based on the popular Saturday morning kids' show by Sid and Marty Kroft. The film gives him a chance to work with one of his new favourite cohorts, Danny McBride. And both Ferrell and McBride are known for their improvisational skills.

"I shouldn't say this, but there's really no trick to it," Ferrell says of improv. "You just film, and if it works great, and if it doesn't you don't use it." Still, though he has such a strong improv background, Ferrell doesn't automatically turn to it. "I'm the first person in support of doing the scene as written. Even though we love doing this, I'm always in fear that we're skipping past the written scene too quickly to get to the improv."

For all his hit comedies, including Anchorman and

Land of the Lost opens in theatres on Friday

Will Ferrell hopes to extend his comic success with Land of the Lost.

"That's really found a foothold in the comedy cult world. It would be a lark to do that."

One character that he did recently revisit was George W. Bush, an impersonation he made famous back on SNL. Ferrell recently received an Emmy nomination for his limited-run Broadway show lampooning the former president, You're Welcome America: A Final Night with George W. Bush.

"There's this image that I've been doing a Bush impersonation every weekend somewhere around the country for five years now," Ferrell says, though he stopped playing bush when he left SNL in 2002. "It was a fun thing to revisit and also put to bed at the same time."

O'Brien's Tonight Show a work in progress

TV An English friend of mine got his first dose of Jay Leno and Conan O'Brien last week, and commented that while Jay seemed friendly and confident, his Tonight Show replacement was more of a cipher. He wondered, "Do you think O'Brien will fit in?"

That's the multimillion-dollar question. O'Brien has only taken over shows, and never originated his own. NBC's Tonight is bigger than O'Brien, which means he's got to conform to expectations — while trying to give it his imprimatur.

After one show, let's say he's a work in progress. O'Brien's debut appearance Monday opened up with a segment in which he ran cross-country from New York (Late Night's home) to the brand-new Universal Studios stage in Hollywood.

The layout fits traditional Tonight templates, but the new set is shaped by wavy arcs which, along with the redesigned show logo, call to mind a retro look, as if 30 Rock's art deco design was also transplanted.

It was a debut episode de-conan O'Brien signed for those with ADD: O'Brien's monologue included video gags on political figures, a paean to his 1992 Ford Taurus, his nosebleed seats at the Lakers game, and a stint guiding the Universal Studios Tour. When not immersed in pretaped segments, O'Brien commanded the stage, but seemed more comfortable laughing it up with erstwhile sidekick-turned-announcer Andy Richter than interacting with his 380 audience members. The band, led by Max Weinberg, got barely a nod.

Will Ferrell was a safe choice as a guest; he almost made O'Brien superfluous as he took over the house and deadpanned his way through the segment.

Pukesh's passion tested

Lastest Top Model to be sent home maintains her vigor

BRIAN COULTON
For Metro Canada

In a model's life, it's all about balance.

That's the lesson the remaining nine women vying to be Canada's Next Top Model learned on last night's episode. Meeting Jay Manuel in a courtroom, the silver-maned show host greeted them from a judge's pedestal, the women learned they'd be thrown a staple Top Model challenge — to balance the look of an unfamiliar new makeover with a great photograph.

Looks of excitement overtook the women as judge Manuel sentenced them to be cut and coloured, several taking after beauty icons like Linda Evangelista, Debbie Harry and Bettie Page. The latter was the muse for Calgary's Nikita Kiceluk, who appeared to abhor the pinup girl's trademark short bangs.

But whether the model hopefuls took to their looks instantly became secondary when given the week's photo challenge. To match their cutting-edge appearance, the women were whisked to the recently renovated Art Gallery of Ontario to pose in haute couture Italian fashions while balancing atop ladders in high heels, and with male models supporting them.

While Kiceluk most vocally loathed her look, she was hush-hush at the judging ceremony. The panel agreed her photograph was the week's strongest, advancing her to the competition's next stage.

Two women who wholeheartedly embraced their makeovers — Rebecca Wyse of Cambridge, Ont. and Vancouver's Jill Pukesh — found themselves teetering toward the bottom of the pack, when they were marked as the bottom two. But, when Wyse's pseudo-Twiggy pose came up against Pukesh's alleged lack of passion, it was the latter that lost her balance, the second woman to be sent home.

Canada's Next Top Model Jill Pukesh was the second woman to be sent home.

"It does suck to get sent home so early but, at the same time, I'm not complaining because just getting on the show was good enough for me," said Pukesh on the phone from

Vancouver. "It was kind of like getting behind the scenes of what the industry really is like on a day-to-day basis."

She acknowledges the importance of having passion in the modeling industry and said she obviously had it, or she wouldn't have auditioned. "Just because I'm not head over heels wailing on the show, doesn't mean I don't have passion."

And while she said she might have tried harder to convey her vigor when speaking with judges, Pukesh maintains that with her, what you see is what you get.

"I'm not going to change who I am just to suck up to anyone. I know that I have passion, and that's all that matters to me."

Tot's death like Natasha's?

TRAGEDY Billy Bob Thornton's ex-wife has compared the death of the toddler their daughter was babysitting to the passing of Natasha Richardson, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

Melissa Parish — who was married to Thornton for two years before splitting in 1980 — defended Amanda Brumfield, who has been charged with alleged child neglect after the one-year-old girl she was caring for died following a fall from her playpen.

Brumfield allegedly witnessed the accident, which took place in her Florida home last October, but failed to call an ambulance, the website reports. Brumfield says the baby seemed "happy and playful."

Parish thinks her daughter should not be blamed for the death because she had no way of knowing the baby was injured.

She likened the accident to the death of Natasha Richardson, who passed away earlier this year after a skiing accident, even though she felt fine after the fall.

Parish explained: "There are no signs of distress, then there is no reason to immediately call police."

More than two hours after the fall, Brumfield allegedly awoke from a nap to find the toddler "limp." Doctors later discovered she had died as a result of a fractured skull and a subdural hematoma.

Detectives investigating the case claim Brumfield's story is inconsistent with the girl's injuries and charged her with child neglect causing harm or disability on Friday.

She was later released on bail.

Thornton's publicist said the actor hasn't spoken to Brumfield for "a substantial number of years."

For sale: LiLo's borrowed car

CELEBRITY SOUVENIR Lindsay Lohan's borrowed sports car is up for auction, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The Maserati Quattroporte car — worth $115,000 US — was put on website eBay by its owner Dennis DeSantis, with a starting price of $25,000.

He had lent the white car to the actress in March, but days later her assistant had an accident while driving, causing around $10,000 of damage to its front.

Pornography producer DeSantis reportedly wasn't worried by the damage to the car, however, and had sent it back to her as soon as it was repaired.

Lohan, 22, drove the car until it was removed by tow truck on May 27 for being illegally parked near her ex-girlfriend Samantha Ronson's home in Los Angeles. She instead rented a black Rolls Royce Silver Phantom.

The auction listing for the Maserati says it has been driven by Lohan, but doesn't mention any accidents. Fans have until June 11 to make a bid for the vehicle.

THE HONEST TRUTH

Daniel Radcliffe was disappointed after he filmed his first on-screen love scene — because the "sexy" moment he dreamed of never materialized, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

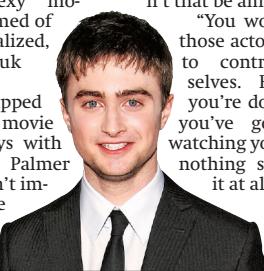

The star stripped off for 2007 movie December Boys with co-star Teresa Palmer — but he wasn't impressed by the experience.

He says,

"Whenever you watch those scenes in films you always think, 'That must be so sexy to do and wouldn't that be amazing.'

"You wonder how those actors manage to control themselves. But when you're doing it and you've got people watching you, there is nothing sexy about it at all."

Paris was Bruno's original victim?

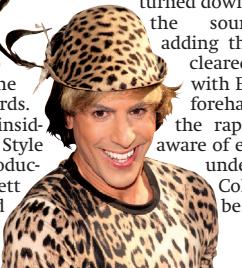

20/20 HINDSIGHT

It turns out but she declined. Eminem wasn't the first choice to play victim to Sasha Baron Cohen's Bruno character at the MTV Movie Awards.

A production insider tells Life & Style Weekly that producer Mark Burnett first approached Paris Hilton about the stunt,

"Paris is quite happy she turned down the offer," the source says, adding that Burnett cleared the prank with Eminem beforehand, though the rapper wasn't aware of exactly how underdressed Cohen would be.
